Girls' Television and New Media Camp Gala Screening

Girls from the Women in Media Foundation's (WIMF) Girls' Television and New Media Camp will unveil three films that they have created at a gala screening event taking place at the National Archives in Ottawa. For two weeks the girls have been working on their films at Algonquin College, utilizing their state-of-the-art media facilities. The WIMF Girls' Television and New Media Camp is offered to girls between the ages of 12-15 from culturally and economically diverse backgrounds and gives teenage girls a unique chance to work as camera operators, lighting and audio technicians and video tape editors as they script, shoot and edit their own videos. The Honourable Marlene Catterall, M.P. Ottawa West—Nepean, will be on hand to bring greetings from the Department of Canadian Heritage. The WIMF gratefully acknowledges Algonquin College as their Ontario college host of choice.
