ALGONQUIN COLLEGE LAUNCHES SCHOOL IN CHINA

Algonquin College President Robert Gillett will sign a Letter of Intent with Yu Min Hong, President of New Oriental School, to offer Algonquin College's two-year Computer Programmer program in Beijing, China. This partnership will see upwards of 600 students taking Algonquin College's Computer Programmer program in Beijing this Fall, with a future potential of 10,000 students studying several programs in seven cities across China.

Who: Morris Uremovich, Dean, School of Advanced Technology, Algonquin College, and representatives from New Oriental School will be present during the signing of the Letter of Intent between Algonquin College and New Orient School.

What: This new joint venture involves Algonquin College professors delivering Algonquin's two-year Computer Programmer program on site at New Oriental School's Beijing Campus.

This is a preliminary document leading up to the official May 8 signing, in Beijing, of an agreement between Algonquin College and New Oriental School.

When: Thursday, March 28th at 1:30 p.m.

Where: Algonquin College, Woodroffe Campus, Rosser Boardroom, C Building, 5th floor.
