Community and Justice Services

Ontario College Diploma
Academic Year: 2019/2020
2 Years
Program Code: 0466X01FWO
Ottawa Campus

Our Program

Choose a career that betters your community from the inside out.

The two-year Community and Justice Services Ontario College Diploma program is designed to provide you with theoretical and practical experience in:

- legal and theoretical aspects of behaviour
- safety and security measures and techniques
- interviewing and intervention skills

Study topics include:

- addictions
- mental illness
- group dynamics
- behaviour management
- communications
- special populations (such as Aboriginal and female offenders), and
- the role of victims in the criminal justice system

The program includes insight into working with adult and youth populations who are at risk or in conflict with the law, and victims in both community and/or institutional facilities. It provides you with a broad range of theory and practice and prepares you with the necessary skills for work in the field.

Take part in many field trips including a tour of a federal prison and a three-day stay at an open custody facility.

Your studies are enhanced in the second year of the program through more than 300 hours of field placement. The field placement provides an opportunity to apply the knowledge and skill you have learned in the classroom. Emphasis is placed on behavioural assessment and case management, report writing and building professional client-worker relationships appropriate to the setting. This work-integrated learning experience also allows students to make immediate and significant contributions to the field.

Upon graduation, you are ready to work with a variety of client populations. You may find employment in:

- various agencies
- residential facilities
- provincial or federal correctional institutions, or
• other services and programs

SUCCESS FACTORS

This program is well-suited for students who:

Admission Requirements for the 2020/2021 Academic Year

College Eligibility

• Ontario Secondary School Diploma (OSSD) or equivalent. Applicants with an OSSD showing senior English and/or Mathematics courses at the Basic Level, or with Workplace or Open courses, will be tested to determine their eligibility for admission; OR

• Academic and Career Entrance (ACE) certificate; OR

• General Educational Development (GED) certificate; OR

• Mature Student status (19 years of age or older and without a high school diploma at the start of the program). Eligibility may be determined by academic achievement testing for which a fee of $50 (subject to change) will be charged.

Program Eligibility

• English, Grade 12 (ENG4C or equivalent).

• International applicants must provide proof of the subject specific requirements noted above along with proof of either: (IELTS / TOEFL) IELTS-International English Language Testing Service (Academic) Overall band of 6.0 with a minimum of 5.5 in each band; OR TOEFL-Internet-based (iBT)-overall 80, with a minimum of 20 in each component: Reading 20; Listening 20; Speaking 20; Writing 20.

• Applicants with international transcripts must provide proof of the subject specific requirements noted above and may be required to provide proof of language proficiency.

Should the number of qualified applicants exceed the number of available places, applicants will be selected on the basis of their proficiency in English.

Program-specific Requirements:
Though not an admission requirement, applicants must note the important information listed below regarding program-specific requirements.

Program Progression:
This applies to all students studying on-campus and on-line: Upon admission to the program, all students must submit current (no older than six months) Criminal Records Checks, and complete the College’s Health Assessment process, which includes ensuring that immunizations are up to date.

Any student studying in any level two courses over the summer will NOT be eligible for field placement until all credits have been successfully completed. This means that students who successfully complete their level two studies by the end of April will be given first consideration during the field placement selection process.

(Note: A student with a criminal record may still be able to progress in and complete the program, but such a record may impede a student’s ability to be accepted as a field placement student and to participate in course-related tours. A record may also affect a student’s ability to secure employment after graduation.) Program progression (advancement into subsequent semesters) is contingent upon your success in a number of areas, including fulfilling the program-specific requirements.

For online students to transfer on campus for the second year, students must have completed level two by May 1st of the year they intend to transfer. Students who have not completed level two by this date will be required to wait to transfer the next academic year.

You are required to obtain passing grades in all program courses in order to proceed, and if you fail three or more courses, you will not be allowed to continue in the program.
Field Placement Eligibility:
To be eligible for placement, all third-level students must:

- have completed all of Levels 1, 2 and 3 courses with a minimum grade point average of 2.0.
- submit a Police Records Check (for work with vulnerable populations), a copy of which will be required by the placement agency
- completion of the Health Assessment process for returning students, which includes ensuring that immunizations are up to date; placement agencies may require a copy of current immunization records as well.
- provide proof of certification in standard First Aid/CPR (which must be valid upon graduation).

Note:
The first year of the program is also offered through the Centre for Continuing and Online Learning. The second year must be completed at the Woodroffe Campus.

Field Placement/Clinical Experience:
Students will participate in one block field placement in a community and/or justice service agency during the second year of the program.

Course Descriptions

COR1740 Mental Health
The ways in which various systems (e.g. criminal justice, income assistance, health, education, child welfare, etc.) have been established means that those with mental health diagnoses are more likely to come into contact with the law. Coming into contact with the law can also lead to significant mental health distress. Students examine issues relating to mental health as relevant to the community and justice field. Students recognize some of the most common signs and symptoms associated with mental health disabilities. Essential information on mental health, including an understanding of assessment and treatment options is explored. Students develop a strengths-based approach to working with clients with mental health disabilities. This approach examines the impacts of stigma, social isolation, and poverty linked to mental health issues and the effect on health and wellbeing.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1756 Introduction to Psychology

Psychology is the study of the mind and behaviour. Students critically examine the fundamental principles of psychology and provide an overview of the major subjects of psychological inquiry. Students have the opportunity to gain a better understanding of why humans behave the way that they do through active learning and collaboration in the classroom.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1800 Sexuality and Gender Studies

Within the community justice field, workers support people with a range of lived experiences. Students examine sexuality and gender topics as relevant to this field. The objective is to develop and promote greater personal awareness and social understanding within the areas of sexual identity, gender expression and gender identity. Students develop an understanding of the diversity of viewpoints and values with respect to human sexuality, and a sensitivity and acceptance of others’ sexual attitudes and behaviours that may differ from one’s own. Students explore their own knowledge, beliefs and values through a blend of lecture, audiovisual materials, class discussions and group activities.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1801 Ethics and Professional Practice

Ethical guidelines inform the day to day decisions made by people working in the community and justice field. Focus is on supporting students to develop an ethical decision-making compass based on agency and ministry standards. Students also have the opportunity to sharpen their skills in professional practice in preparation for transitioning into their placement.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1802 Working with Children, Youth and Families

The skills required to work with children, youth and families are essential for many employment opportunities in the community and justice field. Students examine developmentally appropriate approaches to working with children, youth, and caregivers, as well as inclusive practices to support diverse families. Students also have an opportunity to better understand family dynamics and the ways in which family struggles are influenced by forces such as trauma, addiction, immigration, poverty, separation/divorce, colonization, and child protection.

Prerequisite(s): COR1920 and COR1960
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1835 Correctional Practices

In the Community Justice Services field, many clients have experience with the correctional system.
Students develop an understanding of the organizational framework of federal and provincial correctional services. Students explore challenges and responsibilities as well as essential institutional security duties when working in this setting. Through a critical perspective, emphasis is on the many structural reasons why people become involved in, or return to the criminal justice system.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1910 Social Issues Seminar

When working in the community and justice field, it is essential to understand and have empathy for the justice issues that the people we work with face. Students explore a range of current social justice issues and self-reflect on the attitudes, feelings and experiences that inform their perspectives on these issues. Students learn to apply an anti-oppressive lens to understand and discuss social change. Through a variety of activities including group discussions, audio-visual materials, films, articles and personal journals, students self-reflect to understand the ways in which their belief systems can impact their professional practice with marginalized communities.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1914 Community and Justice Resources

Those working in the community and justice field must have a strong awareness of the resources and services available to assist their clientele. Students investigate available services and programs for youth and adults who have had conflict with the law as well as programs designed to support survivors of violence. This includes programs inside institutions, alternatives to incarceration, after-care and transitional housing programs, and community services. Topics are discussed in a seminar-type learning environment, enhanced by guest speakers from various community and institutional resources.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1916 Fundamentals of Group Facilitation

Community and justice workers are often expected to facilitate groups in both community and institutional settings. Students examine the basic elements of group process and practice including issues of group leadership, group member roles, characteristics of effective facilitators, stages of group development, skills required for effective facilitation, conflict resolution and ethical considerations for group facilitation. Through applied learning activities and collaboration, students develop these skills.

Prerequisite(s): COR1920
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1917 Indigenous Studies

It is essential that workers in the community and justice field have knowledge and understanding of colonization and its impacts on the people with whom we work. Students explore the relationships between Indigenous peoples and settler communities within the context of colonization. Students learn about the legislation and oppressive practices which have had and continue to have an impact on Indigenous people in Canada, including the Indian Act, residential schools, the Sixties Scoop, contemporary approaches to child protective services and the over-representation of Indigenous peoples in the criminal justice system. Additionally, students examine cultural practices and symbols, and explore self-determination, self-government and the treaty-making process. Resistance and change movements will also be explored.

Prerequisite(s): COR1910
Corerequisite(s): none
COR1919 Intervention Skills I

Community and justice workers require a toolkit of intervention approaches to support the people they work with. Students develop basic individual support skills widely used in the community and justice field. Students examine approaches and interventions which foster strong and collaborative relationships with clients. Students also practice and develop competency in basic intervention skills such as active listening, awareness of body language, using open and closed questions, use of empathy to build trust and self-reflection. These competencies are used to work with clients across differences of class, race, gender, age, ability, sexual orientation, religion, and culture. These skills are developed through a variety of learning approaches, including lectures, role plays, discussions, and small group activities.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1921 Youth Justice

To better serve the young people we work with and understand how the youth justice system affects them, we must understand how the system was developed and how it has evolved. Students explore the youth justice system from historical, theoretical and practical perspectives. Students also develop an understanding of this system including child protection, policing, court, youth detention, alternatives to sentencing, community programs and relevant legislation. Emphasis is on enabling students to work effectively with young people in residential, custody and community settings. A variety of skills and approaches are explored. Contemporary and historical case studies, scenarios, and class discussion underline the issues and challenges involved in working in this system.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1922 Intervention Skills II

Trauma-informed practice is a strengths-based approach that focuses on safety, relationship, choice, collaboration and empowerment as well as respect for diversity. It supports community and justice workers to understand how the experiences of clients may shape the ways in which they engage in the system. Students develop trauma-informed case management and crisis intervention skills. Case management is a collaborative process of assessment, planning, systems navigation, care coordination, evaluation, and advocacy. Students also develop crisis intervention skills including verbal and non-verbal disengagement skills that focus on the principles of empowerment and collaboration.

Prerequisite(s): COR1920 and COR1960
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1923 Introduction to Criminology

Criminology is the study of the concepts of “crime” and “deviance” that employs a multi-disciplinary lens of psychology, biology, and sociology to explore the justice system to understand how crime comes to be defined and understood. Critically exploring definitions of crime and deviance from a criminological lens allows students to understand the ways in which power and influence have shaped definitions of criminality and how inequalities exist in how society regards “criminality” of groups of people based on factors such as class, race, education, etc.

Prerequisite(s): COR1928
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1928 Introduction to Sociology

Sociology is the study of society and culture which aims to explore our interdependencies and differences. By providing a critical lens to topics such as inequality, gender and sexuality, ethnicity, culture, and deviance, emphasis is placed on understanding power relations in society and their impact on particular communities. Students explore key concepts, figures, and theories of the discipline of sociology while developing their own “sociological imagination.” Focus is on student enlightenment and empowerment to challenge their worldview through a combination of discussions, case studies, readings, and lectures.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): COR1754

COR1929 Fitness, Leadership and Self-Care

Community and justice services is a demanding field that requires workers to practice work-life balance. Focus is on self-care practices such as fitness and nutrition that support the community and justice worker to maintain longevity in the field. Students develop recreational leadership skills through a variety of experiential activities. A focus on the importance of self-care will be addressed. Students are supported to develop and practice skills and strategies to address the physical, mental and emotional requirements of self-care.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1949 Addictions and Harm Reduction

Substance use should be viewed as occurring on a continuum. As a result, the addiction and recovery supports that an individual can seek will vary from person to person. Students learn to work from a client-centered, trauma-informed perspective to understand how to support a wide variety of clients dealing with substance use related challenges. Students gain an understanding of current biological, psychological and social theories that inform our understanding of addiction treatment. Students also develop competency in harm reduction as well as other addiction support modalities. Emphasis is on de-pathologizing and de-stigmatizing narratives associated with drug use. Students have the opportunity to learn from a variety of mediums including guest speakers, audio-visual materials, discussions, small group activities, and lectures.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1950 Canadian Justice System and Legislation

In order to support clients, it is necessary to understand the systems and institutions which have significant impact on their lives. Students examine the roles and functions of each component of the Canadian criminal justice system - police, courts, and corrections. Students become familiar with how these components relate to each other and how legislation impacts the system as a whole. Through assignments and presentations, students explore contemporary issues relating to the field.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1959 Community Building Practices

Flourishing communities tend to have strong community support systems in place. Students have the opportunity to examine community building practices designed to address systemic and structural issues in our communities. Community-led approaches are examined as a means to address issues of over-criminalization and social and economic marginalization. Course content focuses on community capacity development including poverty reduction and food scarcity strategies, health promotion, approaches to address social isolation and housing issues, youth mentorship, and community policing. Students develop skills in implementing needs assessments, relationship building, community organizing, fundraising, advocacy and public education.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1960 Trauma-Informed Practice

It is essential for community and justice workers to have a solid understanding of the ways in which trauma can impact the behaviour of their clients. This course focuses on various experiences including neglect, abuse, abandonment, exposure to violence, loss, separation, disaster and war.
Using a strengths-based perspective, students develop an understanding of shock, developmental/relational, and social/cultural forms of trauma, as well as the connection between trauma and criminalization. Trauma-informed approaches bring together current theories of how trauma impacts brain development, learning, relationships and behaviours. This course reviews evidence-based interventions that support clients to find a sense of safety in the present and connect with resources. Students also examine vicarious trauma and the importance of self-care to this work.

Prerequisite(s): COR1754
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1961 Foundations of Anti-Oppression Practice

An essential component of community and justice work includes supporting people dealing with systemic barriers to accessing the supports and resources needed to thrive. Many people who continuously face oppression in everyday life also struggle with issues of social identity and self-worth due to internalized oppression. Focus is on developing tools and strategies to support these clients, specifically anti-racist, anti-violence, anti-ableist, and anti-classist practices. Students hear from guest speakers and engage in role plays, group activities and resource sharing to better enhance their anti-oppressive skill set.

Prerequisite(s): COR1910 and COR1917
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1963 Professional Development

Students participate in a two-week intensive course that brings together theory and practice and provides students with critical professional training that is applicable in a wide-variety of workplace settings. Focus is on the integration of recent field placement experiences and support to develop professional skills in preparation for employment in the field.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corerequisite(s): none

COR1965 Field Placement

Authentic work experiences provide students with a realistic perspective of a career and provide potential employers with much-desired experience with respect to new employees. Students work in a community or justice services agency selected by the faculty in consultation with the student. This is an opportunity for students to integrate theory and practice. The completion of practicum is based on an assessment of performance by faculty in consultation with the fieldwork supervisor and the student.

Prerequisite(s): COR1740 and COR1754 and COR1800 and COR1801 and COR1802 and COR1835 and COR1910 and COR1914 and COR1920 and COR1921 and COR1922 and COR1923 and COR1928 and COR1929 and COR1949 and COR1950 and COR1959 and COR1960 and COR1961 and COR1963 and ENL1813A and ENL1823A and GED0466

COR1966 Field Placement Seminar

Reflective practice provides opportunities for growth and development for all participants. Students have the opportunity to make connections between the theory they have learned in the first three semesters of study and their practical experience in field placement. Students learn from each other’s direct experience. Through group discussions and self-reflection opportunities, students continue to build skills as community and justice workers in preparation for employment opportunities in the future.

Prerequisite(s): COR1740 and COR1754 and COR1800 and COR1801 and COR1802 and COR1835 and COR1910 and COR1914 and COR1916 and COR1917 and COR1920 and COR1921 and COR1922 and COR1923 and COR1928 and COR1929 and COR1949 and COR1949 and COR1950 and COR1959 and COR1960 and COR1961 and COR1963 and ENL1813A and ENL1823A and GED0466
ENL1813A Communications I

Communication remains an essential skill sought by employers, regardless of discipline or field of study. Using a practical, vocation-oriented approach, students focus on meeting the requirements of effective communication. Through a combination of lectures, exercises, and independent learning, students practise writing, speaking, reading, listening, locating and documenting information, and using technology to communicate professionally. Students develop and strengthen communication skills that contribute to success in both educational and workplace environments.

Prerequisite(s): none
Corequisite(s): none

ENL1823A Communications II

Students continue to develop their workplace writing and speaking skills. Students learn the protocols to write request letters, daily logs, occurrence reports, proposals and meeting minutes. They prepare for field placement and workplace interviews by creating resumes and undergoing a situational-style job interview. Students also complete a variety of role-play exercises designed to prepare them for speaking tasks in the field, such as participation in meetings and delivery of educational workshops.
